

The Girl who let her Butterflies roam free

Created by Skye, 9 yrs

There was a house and inside the house were some people who liked butterflies.

And one of the people in the house, it was a little girl, who absolutely loved butterflies.

The family made little homes for butterflies, and every day she would go out and play with them before and after school. And because every day she went to play with them it made the butterflies remember her, every day. She enjoyed playing with them every day, and from the age of 9 she really loved butterflies, she had a pet butterfly, and her room was themed in butterflies. She enjoyed their pretty patterns and how they fluttered around all day.

There was only one problem, that her dad was allergic to butterflies sometimes. But he was away on a 2 year trip. He was in Broome but she flew all the way to Perth because that's where she could have butterflies. She felt happy and sad at the same times. She felt sad because she had to leave her parents, but she felt happy because she finally got to be free to roam with her butterflies.

To roam free with the butterflies feels really really really really good.

And she lived happily ever after in a four storey house with all her butterflies and pets.
